FBI UPDATE RELATING TO DISTRIBUTED DENIAL OF SERVICE (DDoS) ATTACK ACTIVITY

August 8, 2013

For Your Information: The FBI has released updated information concerning the recent Distributed Denial of Service (DDoS) attack activity that may be helpful to your institution, especially your internal IT support staff. Two specific botnets, "Brobot" and "Kamikaze/Toxin" have been used in over 350 separate DDoS attacks. The spreadsheet in the link below contains indicators associated with the attacks, that will allow IT personnel to enable network defense activities and reduce the risk of similar attacks in the future.

The FBI provided the spreadsheet which contains attacking scripts, IP addresses, internet service provider (ISP, also called internet access provider) information and other indicators related to activity conducted by cyber actors. The information may assist in identifying and removing malicious code from compromised systems and prevent further computer network exploitations by these specific actors.
